Dear Ernie and Clint,

I'm writing this note to tell you how pleased I am with the final result of the bracket reproduction project that your team undertook for me over the last year.

When I first contemplated reproducing this part, I had many reservations. Over the last twenty years, a number of Corvette enthusiasts have attempted to duplicate this very rare part only to give up when faced with the extreme complexity of the part and the high cost of the tooling. I must admit that I was very disheartened when I first began to speak with machine shops about the project. Invariably they did not grasp how critical it was that it be an EXACT reproduction: they wanted to produce a bracket that was 'close'. Frequently I was advised to have the bracket produced by the wire EDM process and to forget about having the parts stamped as they were originally produced. A number of people advised me to locate a company in China to have it made.

Luckily I met Clint at a Corvette event and he showed me the beautiful tri-power intakes that you reproduce. I was very impressed. When I told Clint I was looking for someone to reproduce a stamped part, he encouraged me to let Coffman Corvette review it and provide a quote. This was the turning point that I had been looking for.

Almost a year has passed, and I look back at all the hard work and trial and error that went into the bracket project and I am still truly impressed with your team's commitment to producing an EXACT reproduction of the bracket. I have shown it to a number of knowledgeable Corvette enthusiasts and they all agree that it couldn't have come out any better. Their judgment is a testimonial to the skill, craftsmanship and commitment of your team to producing a superior product, right here in the USA.

In closing, I want to thank your employees and you again for such a great job you did on my project. I look forward to doing another project with you again in the future.

Sincerely,
 Kevin Cavanaugh
